Moslems Riot in Egypt Israeli Troops Stop Protests in West Bank, Gaza

By Alan Cowell

New York Times Service CAIRO - The Egyptian police beat hundreds of anti-Israeli protesters chanting Islamic fundamen-talist slogans Friday and besieged others at one of Cairo's most eminent mosques, witnesses said. The protest was the latest and the most dramatic in a series of demonstrations provoked by the Israeli crackdown on Palestinians in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, in which 22 Palestinians died.

In Cairo, turmoil seized the tangied streets and bazaars around the Al-Azhar mosque, a seat of Sunni Moslem learning and theological authority for 1,000 years, after hundreds of protesters emerged from Friday prayers, brandishing the Koran, Islam's holy book, and chanting slogans.

The clashes renewed concerns among officials in Egypt about the dumestic repercussions of Israel's actions for Egypt, the only Arab country to have made peace with the Jewish state.

Mr. Cornish, who in 1970 wrote a White House report called "Toward Balanced Growth," said that many members of the society are predicting a serious economic slump between now and the end of the century, a recession that could increase the danger of regional con-flict or even a Third World war. He predicted that many will look back on the 1980s as the end of an age of affluence for Western societies. [He said his own view was that the 1950s was a golden age for the United States and the 1960s for

LOS ANGELES - The Great Airline Smoking Revolution of 1988, a time of tense readjustment to a new social order, began in spectacular fashion, if somewhat early, on TWA Flight 853 from Boston to Los Angeles.

When it was over Wednesday night, 11 passengers had hit eigatettes and booed loud-ly to protest a smoking ban, a flight attendant had filed assault charges, the captain had radioed Los Angeles for the police, and four protesters were led away for questioning.

That such passions could be inflamed near-ly four months before a scheduled U.S. ban on smoking on short flights suggests that the airlines face a difficult transition. "It's a tough one," said Robert Blattner, a Trans World Airlines spokesman in St. Louis. Missouri, who recounted the saga of Flight 853. His arthre and others have four months to plan for the era of no smoking on flights of less than two hours, and to work out a way to handle longer flights, such as the six-hour Boston-to-Los Angeles run. On such flights, U.S. regulations occasionally require smoking bans in some smoking sections.

One airline. Delta, has decided to leap into the unknown immediately. The Atlanta-based carrier said Monday that it would honor a new California law hanning smoking on all air, bus and train trips within the state beginning Friday.

Some other airlines serving California have declared the state law invalid and have agreed to honor only in: 1. S. Lw, applying to all short flights, beginning April 23.

A Detta spokesman, Jim Lundy, said his company had decided to ban smoking on Celifornia flights to tot procedures and cus-tomer relations involved in sntoothing the switch to the federal rules.

"We thought it was a good way to get our feet wet," he said.

That interest in testing new waters was noticeably absent on Flight 853 five hours after it took off Wednesday night.

The problem began when TWA officials discovered, after assigning smokers as usual to seats in the last six rows of coach and the last live rows of business class, that they had an unexpectedly high number of nonsmokers, some of whom who also would have to sit in those rows. There were 272 passengers and 275 seats, giving them little leeway.

Under U.S. regulations, airlines faced with this situation must declare any row with a nonsmoker to be a nonsmoking row. TWA announced, as the passengers boarded, that smoking would be banned in coach and business sections

The desk diary

Half your life's story - or even more - is inscribed on the pages of your desk diary. Yet when you travel or go to meetings, most desk diaries are too cumbersome to take along. That's why the International Herald Tribune — constantly alert to the needs of busy executives — had this desk diary especially designed for its readers. Bound in luxurious silk-grain black leather, it's perfect on your desk, offering all the noting space of any standard desk diary. Yet pick it up and you'll find it weighs a mere 340 grams (12 oz.). No voluminous data and statistics are included in this diary, but on the other hand a removable address book saves hours of re-copying from year to year. Diary measures 22 x 15 cm (8.5 x 6 in.), fits easily into the slimmest attache case, and has gilt-metal corners, gold page-edges and elegant French blue paper. Personalized with gilt initials on the cover, it's a marvelous gift for friends, business contacts and associates. (Note that quantity discounts are available.)

LONDON (Reuters) - Laws took effect Friday in Britain to banish LONDON (Retters) — Laws took effect Priday in pritam to camsu noisy, aging aircraft from its airports. The law is interaded to protect people living near airports from excessive noise. Under the legislation, older planes, including DC-8s and Boeing 707s, will not be allowed to land in Britain unless they are refitted with noise mufflers. The move will mainly affect Third World airlines, including the national carriers of such African nations as Ethiopia, Zimbabwe and Uganda, a spokeswoman for the Civil Aviation Authority said. As well as DC-8s and 707s, older narrow-bodied aircraft, including Boeing 720s and certain models of 727s, 737s and DC-7s, will have to be refitted, the spokeswoman said.

She said the authority was granting exemptions of as long as a year to some airlines on condition they refitted their aircraft within a certain period. Most of those exempted were freight operators who flew into Britain only a few times a year, she said. "We do not anticipate any infringements or drop-off in the number of flights into Britain as a result of the new regulations," she added.

Officials in Harare said Friday that Air Zimbabwe's four Hights a work in Britain are to be redirected to Cologne-Bonn airport in West German where passengers for Britain would be transferred to London's Gatwice Airport on Lufthansa flights. A spokesman for the British aviation authority said Air Zimbabwe had been granted an exemption to fly its 707s into Britain until the end of January.

In U.S., a Growing Dispute Over Wine and Health

By Lawrence M. Fisher

New York Tunes Service OAKVILLE, California — As efforts to curb wine consumption gain momentum, American vintners and wine importers are concerned but widely divided about how to combat the movement.

In the United States, the growing joterest in health and concern with alcohol abuse are fueling a drive for greater regulation of the wine industry

State and federal measures that have been considered or put into effect in the last year include higher excise taxes and requirements that labels disclose ingredients and provide warnings that alcohol can pose a health hazard. They would apply to both foreign and domestic wines sold in the United States. In recent years, sales of table wine have generally declined.

While wine makers say they do not see a direct connection between the decline and the various advocacy groups, some vintners are taking them as a serious threat oonethe-

In general, the wine industry is trying to distance itself from beer and spirits, calliog attention to wine's role as an accompaniment to food rather than as a product for heavy recreational drinking.

It is a tactic that carries little weight with the industry's critics.

Washington Post Service WASHINGTON — The protective sbeath of ozone in Earth's atmosphere declined about 5 percent from 1979 to 1986, according to the first report from an effort to monitor ozone levels worldwide.

The declines were as high as 30 percent to 40 percent over the poles, and up to 60 percent in the Antarcuic "ozone hole" during winter there, when depletion is highest. Levels over the tropics did not ebange, however. Ozone molecules in the stratosphere, six to 20 miles (9.6 to 32 kilometers) up, absorb part of the sun's ultraviolet light, preventing po-tentially harmful amounts from reaching

There is evidence going back 30 years that ozone levels have fluctuated naturally by comparable amounts in cycles of 10 to 15 vears.

CFCs are used as refrigerants and aerosol ropellants and in some industrial processes. It is believed that after being released oo the ground, they eventually rise into the stratosphere.

There, ultraviolet light splits off the mole-cule's chlorine atom. Chlorine acts as a catalyst that turns ozone, a molecule of three oxygen atoms, into ordinary oxygen gas, which has two oxygen atoms and does not absorb ultraviolet light. Atmospheric chemists fear even a small

Forecasts of the effects of CFCs have varied considerably. Some estimates suggest depletions from 3 percent to 8 percent over 50 to 100 years. More extreme projections bold that the ozone layer could be destroyed in a bundred years.

LONDON — Making resolutions for other people last New Year's had mixed results. I didn't have to worry about keeping my own. which was a relief, but not many of those other people lived up to the obligation. Maybe I can do better this time. Here are some suggestions:

Ronald Reagan: I'll leave Nancy home when go to Moscow, and take Michael Deaver instead. That way Raisa woo't have a chance to show off, and who's better at getting in through the back door than Deaver?

Nancy Reagan: I'll get Oscar de la Renta to make up a wardrobe of nothing but babushka head scarves and huge long skirts for my trip to Moscow. That will show Raisa up on her own turf. She'd never think of it.

Raisa Gorbachev: I'll give Nancy a tour of our historie salt moes. She'll have nothing to wear. Mikhail Gorbachev: If I can get Reagan to sound off at the Central Committee, maybe I can

WASHINGTON - The dollar keeps going down. What should be done? The right answer was set out in a statement by 33 prominent econo-mists issued in November by the Institute for International Economics. The first step should be convincing action to eliminate America's structural budget deficit over the next four years. Conversely, the trade surplus areas

- Japan, Western Europe and the newly industrialized Asian countries - have been relying too much on export-led growth and investing savings abroad that could have been better used at home. They need a significant fiscal stimulus.

Against this yardstick, the actions taken by the Group of Seven major countries since Black Monday don't add up to a hill of beans. The only bright spot is Japan, which just an-nounced a budget that sounds suit-ably expansionary. In America, after all the hulfing and puffing, if all goes very well the budget deficit two years from now will be around $150 billion;

the same as m fiscal 1987. Bonn announced measures that it said would stimulate investment by $13 billion. A closer look showed that all it did was make available an extra $180 million for subsidized credits to local government and small- and medium-size business that, in the eyes of many German economists, would in-crease investment very little, if at all.

To the cynical, this merely shows that the proposals of the 33 were politically unrealistic and thus irrelevant. So what should be done? Martin Feldstein argues that as second-best solution the dollar should be allowed to drop a lot further, many suspect that Beryl Spinkel, chairman of the Council of Ecooomic Advisers, agrees. But from Japan and Europe come protests that the dollar must be defended, if neces sary by raising interest rates.

According to the statement by the 33, both are wrong. There is no sec-ond-best solution. The dollar has more or less done its job and is close to the level needed to eliminate the trade deficit. However, unless appropriate policies are adopted, "the dollar could fall a lot further and attempts to prevent it from doing so would be fruitless." Defending the dollar by intervention alone will not work Defending it by raising interest rates which may well become inevitable would lead to a new slide on Wall Street and an election-year recession. Equally, according to the 33, Pro-fessor Feldstein is wrong because "a sharp further fall in the dollar would

These are harsh and unseemly measures. and their use is drawing further criticism upon Israel, including the taunting compar-ison to South Africa. Except for the scale on which these measures are being applied, however, there is nothing new bere. To the million-plus Palestinians who live in the West Bank and Gaza they are the routine of a 20-year occupation. For almost 10 years, for instance, the U.S. State Department has been documenting abuses that taint the official Israeli picture of order, progress, fairness and, when and only when circumstances are compelling, civilized sternness. For Israelis and others, the question has now arisen whether the familiar occupation practices will still do. Or has there been so great a change in the readiness of West Bankers and Gazans to challenge the soldiers and settlers that Israel, to hang on. may have to abandon the pretense of a light hand and openly apply a heavy one? A New Economic Scene

As the dollar rate continues to slide, it reorganizes the world's economy. It is the world's most important price, and affects many other prices. Who are the winners?

In America they are the manufacturers and above all the exporters. Companies that make computers, chemicals and airplanes now have an enormous opportunity. There are also benefits for the American producers who compete in America with imports - mostly denominated in dollars. For those such as Brazil and Argentina with large exports to Europe, export earnings turbed into dollars will increase if the volume of goods only holds steady. That will make it easier for those countries to service their debts. The danger to the Latin Americans, and to the world, is that the industrial economies may fail to adapt fast enough to these new realities and go into a recession. If that should lies, for example, and steel coo panies. The importers are now under fierce pressure to raise their prices.

Next come American farmers, although oot all. The dollar will not belp the dairymen. Again it is the exporters who will see a difference - most notably, grain producers. Through most of this decade, the economic climate has generally favored the service industries over the people who make tangible goods. That advantage is reversing. One seri-ous question for the U.S. economy is whether exporters can expand fast enough to take advantage of the markets opening to them. Abroad, the most conspicuous beneficiaries are theoretically the people of the countries whose currencies are rising fastest, Japan and West Germany; some goods will be cheaper for them because of falling import prices. But their export manufacturers will be burt -- although not quite so much as it looks at first glance. The prices of their imported raw materials and fuel are dropping rapidly. In dollars, the price of oil is currently about two-thirds of what it was two years ago; in marks it is two-fifths as much. For the Latin debtors the falling dollar is. for the present, very helpful. Their debts are loss of their n апкесь ша шк Northern Hemisphere would far outweigh any advantages that the cheaper dollar can bring Third World exporters.

And the losers? Most Americans - those who do not work for computer companies and are not wheat farmers - will come out of the next few years a little poorer even if the country avoids a recession. In Japan and West Germany, falling import prices will reduce the risk of inflation and allow governments to expand their economies quite fast. America is the reverse case. The steady push of import prices on the inflation rate will require the government to hold economic growth down. In the past year inflation has risen faster than average wages and salaries. That is likely to continue. The lower dollar will bring down the U.S. trade deficit, but a lower trade deficit will mean that the country is producing more in relation to consumption - working harder but spending less. The most important question is whether the transition to the world of the cheap dollar will be a smooth one. That will depend on the skill and courage of governments, not on the markets.

Refugee Aid to France?

The United States will provide $8 million tain them. But law prevents France from of its scarce refugee funds for the year to constructing the schools' buildings. build parochial schools in France for North African Jews, Only they are not refugees. Except to Congress and Senator Daniel Inouye, that is, who so labeled them in the pre-adjournment rush to finish the giganoc appropriations bill. The respected Hawaiian Democrat does not ask many favors, but he pressed for this one, and his colleagues acquiesced. One can only imagine the other Christmas presents that will be discovered under the appropriations tree.

Senator loouye is not talking about his $8 million gift for French Jewish schools. The project's sponsot is Ozar Hatorah, a New York-based organization on whose board sits a contributor to Senator Inouye's most recent election campaign.

No doubt the schools are worthy. The French government evidently thinks so: It provides two-thirds of the funds to main-

Maintaining the identity of France's North African Jews is worthwhile. But they are not refugees by any official definition. For years, refugee officials have worked to achieve a common definition to bring evenhandedness to these affairs; well over 10 million people now meet those terms. Refugee aid sustains these people in desperate circumstances. Their number grows rapidly. Countries of asylum are increasingly hard pressed to take them in. International refugee assistance only begins to meet the need. Courtesy of Senator Incuye and his amenable colleagues, $8 million in U.S. refugee monies will go to build schools in one of the world's most highly developed countries. May congressional consciences, hearing campaign funding's siren song, be pricked throughout the new year by this wrong.

In trath, riots, like terrorism, were endemic to the region long before the "occupation" in 1967. Nor do the underlying reasons for the volatility of the present situation have anything to do with the conduct of the "occupiers."

The first and foremost of these reasons is the deplorable condition of the refugee camps, where most of the rioting began. That the problem of several hundred thousand Arab refugees has not been resolved in 40 years is unconscionable.

Blaming Israel for this condition is even more unconscionable. Israel has consistently offered to provide housing for the refugees nearby. But all its efforts have been cynically shot down oot only by the Arabs, who seem to prefer that the refugees fester and remain a political problem, but also by the whole world community. Typically, Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's repeated appeals to the international community -- most recently through the president of Italy - to address this problem bave received next to no attention.

se terri themselves to Israeli rule. But, incredibly, the whole world seems to blame Prime Minister Shamir, who has repeatedly declared his eagenness for direct negotiations without conditions.

His great offense, it seems, is his refusal to accede to the Soviet-PLO proposal for an international conference, a position endorsed until recently by the United States. No one seems to feel that criticism should be leveled against King Hussein of Jordan, even though he clings to the inter-oacional conference idea precisely because he knows it is a nonstarter. Even the conference's greatest advocate in Israel, Foreign Minister Shimon Peres, bas conditioned it on the exclusion of the PLO, on Soviet resumption of diplomatic relations with Israel and on the opening of the Soviet Union's gates to Jewish emigration - conditions unlikely to be met in the foreseeable future.

There is only one route to peace: open-ended, pressure-free, face-to-face direct negotiations between the parties to the conflict. That is the way sovereign states solve their differences. In talks between Jordan and Israel, representatives of the ence cocoon. His reluctance to negotiate with Israel without being assured of at least a complete Israeli withdrawal to the 1949 armistice lines and relinquishment of Jerusalem, a solutioo that would mean Israel's demise, is in a way understandable. His own grandfather, as well as many others, big and small, bave been assassinated for considering compromise and coexistence with Israel. This history, like the recent riots, points to one of the tragedies of the Middle East; the fact that Arab moderates never seem to win the day, at least not for long. A recent item from Cairo tells of the Egyptian Education Ministry's refusal - long before the riots - to allow maps contributed by UNICEF into the Egyptian school system because they included the name Israel — and this 10 years after Anwar Sadat's visit to Jerusalem!

Those who seek the real roots of the Arab-Israeli conflict need look no further.

As the statement of the 33 put it, "A further sharp drop in the dollar — by increasing inflation in America and the threat of recession elsewhere, and further undermining confidence in the world's key currency -- could lead to a financial crisis and a serious world recession.". At the finish of the first America's Cup race, in 1851, a man with a spy glass reported to Queen Victoria, There is no second." Today there is no second-best solution to cutting the U.S. budget deficit. Just letting the dollar drop won't solve anything.

FRANCO-SPANISH FRONTIER -Despite the repeated assertions of Nationalist communiques that the Teruel battle has been won, the Republicans continue to state that they have retreated here and there to avoid useless loss of life, and that at no important point have the Nationalists succeeded in breaking through, despite terrific pressure. PARIS - [The Herald says:] Like other grim episodes of the terrible conflict in Spain, the battle assumed the aspect of a general mèlée. If we believe the Nationalist communiqués, the Francoists' victory was complete, and Teruel is entirely in their hands again. Remember Old What's-His-Name? The Herald Staffers of June 1940 the two dates span one of the more fateful periods of modern history. I realize that to many now the fall of France in World War II may now seem an academic and distant subject. It is difficult to evoke for those who did not live through it the shock and anguish of that time. The lives of millions were changed, if nor disrupted or ended, by the debacle and its sequel.

ECONOMIC SCENE

U.S. Is Facing a Dilemma On Avoiding a Recession

By LEONARD SILK

New York Times Service EW YORK - The year 1987 ended on a downbeat. The dollar, on the last day of the year, traded at record lows of about 121 yen and 1.57 Deutsche marks. In the stock market, by no coincidence, the Dow Jones indus-trial average dropped 11.27 points. Worries about recession were rife, intensified by the sharpest fall in the leading economic indicators since 1981.

The administration desperately hopes to avoid a recession in an election year by using fiscal and monetary policy to keep the U.S. economy growing. At last week's Chicago convention of the American Economic emerged in support of the ad-ministration's efforts to give priority to using those policies to keep the economy expanding, even if it means a further fall of the dollar.

James K. Galbraith of the University of Texas, a former economic adviser to the Democratic members of the Joint Economic Committee of Congress, said the new consensus, shaped after October's stock collapse, has four main points: • Tax increases to narrow the budget deficit should be reduced and deferred "to avoid compounding the adverse demand shock of the crash." · Short-term interest rates should be cut immediately through monetary expansion, regardless of what action is taken on the budget deficit.

• The dollar should be allowed to fall rapidly to competitive levels, eliminating the need for high interest rates, to offset expectations that the Federal Reserve would raise interest rates to keep the dollar from falling further.

• The administration should recognize that economic policy coordination with other major industrial countries to stabilize currencies is a will-o'-the-wisp, and should be abandoned.

However, some economists disagree with the common view that the basic choice is between accepting a recession brought on by tight money to protect the dollar and a policy of easing monetary and fiscal policy-to prevent a recession, letting the dollar fall to its "equilibrium" level.

AROLD van Buren Cleveland, the former chief international economist of Citicorp and now a consultant, does Lond see easy money, in the present circumstances, as the way to protect the U.S. economy. "If the administration and the Fed follow this course," Mr. Cleveland said, "the likely result will be a continuing series of crises in the exchange and financial markets, which would sooner or later drive interest rates to a level that would bring on a recession." As foreign institutions and individuals lose confidence in the dollar, he said, the Fed would be obliged to tighten anyway to prevent a runaway flight from the dollar, even if the economy were already very weak or in recession. Paradoxically, a policy that gives priority to avoiding recession could bring a recession of unusual severity, he said.

thers & Rudd and home Faced with this paradox, the United States faces a strategic policy choice in 1988: A policy to defend the dollar implies a willingness to accept a sluggish economy, and quite possibly a recession, in an election year. The opposite choice is to use fiscal and monetary policy to spur domestic demand. But if demand is strong, the trade balance will scarcely improve and could worsen. Foreign investors may refuse to invest in dollar assets. The dollar could fall out of control. Interest rates would rise steeply, knocking the stock market down hard again, hurting business investment and consumer spending, and thrusting the economy into deep recession.

NEWSMAKERS: 5 Who Helped Shape '87 Events Gephardt Made CANION:

Tweaking IBM

Mr. Canion, who is in his early 40s. is hardly a gregarious Silicon Valley entrepreneur. He was so quiet and uncomfortable talking before groups of people that his venture capitalist, Benjamin M. Rosen, now Compaq's chairman, dragged him to a speech julor before the company went public.

But success has loosened him up. and in the last year Mr. Canion has warmed to the task of tweaking IBM.

It started with Compao's portable computers, whose success IBM has never been able to match. The Mr. Gephardt, 46, is also known on Capitol Hill as a man with a war heated up in late 1986 with the introduction of the Compaq 386. the first personal computer to use the super-fast Intel 80386 microprocessor.

The company has always thrived by offering slightly more features or more flexibility than IBM at a comparable price.

So far, the bet has paid off. Mr. Canion predicts growth of 20 per-cent to 30 percent next year.

keen instinct for emerging issues. He was sensitive to the theme of competitiveness, for instance, long before it became a fashionable notion in the trade debate. From a political standpoint, Mr. hardi speaks out much less often, and less vocally, about his amendmestic markets to U.S. goods while selling large amounts of products in the United States.

The player disputed a decision by Uday Vasant Pimple and smashed him over the head with a wooden stump from one of the wickets during a match at Nagpur, central India, last Sunday, PTI quoted police as saying.

The player was not identified. Pimple, 20, was admitted to a hospital with serious head injuries and died there. Police were looking for the player, the agency said.

Team Canada Wins Davos Tourney

DAVOS, Switzerland (AP) — A Team Canada squad edged Soviet air force team Kriliya of Moscow 4-3 after a penalty shootout to win the final Thursday of the 61st Spengler Cup Hockey Tournament.

Regular, time ended with the score 3-3. The Canadians had won the tournament last year but the team's latest edition had included more young and less-known players, which made Kuliya the pretournament favorite.

Tim Barakett scored twice for the Canadians.

"It's a marriage saver, no question," said Mark Gintis, one of the two inventors of the hand-held sports ticker.

Gintis and Bill Nelson, two 37-year-old former college roommates, are the brains behind Beeper Pins Inc. The service provides such instant information as weather conditions, point spreads and five-minute updates on U.S.

The Sports Page is a 4-ounce (112-gram) device that disseminates scores of scores and oodles of updates from around the United States. It looks, and sounds, likes the average paging device. But on it, scores are automatically fed via computer to satellite to a two-line professional and college sports.

tional Football League early point spreads and over-under totals come up early Monday.

Skipping past unwanted information is done with the touch of a button. Best of all, the inventors say, those out on the town don't need a pocketful of change and a head full of excuses for trips to the pay phone.

The beeper can hold 85 scores at a time. The only problem so far has been the infrequent missed update due to local weather conditions, which can interfere with satellite transmissions, Gintis said.

"For the sports fanatic - I mean, they go gaga over it," said Nelson, a Las Vegas resident. People can't believe what it is - a guy hits a screen on the device. When one of two buttons home run, and three minutes later, you're geton the front is depressed, the information apting an updated score."

Nelson and Gintis estimate that about 30 percent of the huyers are serious gamhlers; others are just regular guys, albeit sports-crazed ones, like Harvey Brodsky, a salesman who lives in Manhattan.

"For a sports fan like me, 1 love it. It's the greatest," said Brodsky, 47, who turned to the beeper after his wife vetoed a satellite dish for the television. "It's a great toy. And when you wear it with a suit, everybody thinks you're a doctor."

Brodsky's raves don't surprise Gintis, a Floridian who is not a sports fan but who provided the technological input. "Of customers who have had our product more than 30 days," be said, "we've had five people bring it back. People who love it absolutely love it."

again, despite being named to its 1988 Olympics and Federation Cup teams

Mandlikova, 25, the world's No. 5 ranked player, took the oath of citizenship in Sydney. She later flew to Brisbane where, at a news conference, she acknowledged she was angered at Czechoslovakia's decision to name her to the 1988 Federation Cup team.

"I was a little bit upset about that because I think if you're named for the Federation Cup you should at least be asked," Mandlikova said. "But there's no way I'll play." Asked if she would consider playing for her native country again, she said, "no, I won't play." Helena Sukova, a Czechoslovak player, told reporters earlier that Mandlikova had been named to the country's 1988 Olympic team. It was not clear when Mandlikova would be eligible to play for the Australian national team. Normally there is a three-year waiting period after becoming a citizen, but Australia could appeal the rule.

A Movie Set in Texas

By Wilborn Hampton New York Times Service

AXAHACHIE, Texas - The W Plaza Theater on South Main Street, across from the county courthouse, is closed, but the demise of Waxahachie's only movie house is not just another statistic in the war of the videocassette against motion pictures in rural America. This oortheast Texas town boasts perhaps an even larger percentage of between-times actors among its 17,600 citizens than Hollywood.

Io the 20 years since Robert Benton returned to his hometown to shoot "Bonnie and Clyde," Waxahachie and its environs have been the setting of two dozen featurelength films and hundreds of television shows. In the last four years, three movies made here have won major Academy Awards.

The town itself is one of those dusty little couoty seats that thrived during the Great Depression. Cottoo was king and Waxahachie was its capital. There were 50 cotton gins in full operation; oow there is only one in the entire county and the last time it was used was for a movie set.

Waxahachie has a stately granite courthouse on the main smare. 19th-century homes with wide verandas, and a cemetery shaded by oak trees that by oow must be one of the most photographed in the country. It also has L.T. Felty.

T. Felty, as he introduces himself, is a former high school principal, science teacher and football coach who holds the official title of Chili Adviser to the Governor of Texas. He is also an actor and a vice president of the Waxahachie Bank and Trust Co. And he can get you 800 extras on a day's notice.

That was for 'Square Dance,' " Feity recalled receotly. "They called me and said they needed 800 people by tomorrow, I rounded up everybody I knew and some I didn'1. It was set over in Wolf City and I played an elder in the church." He chuckled at that.

But a lot of people in the film business think of Felty for just about anything they might oeed, even ready cash.

"There was one producer --- I woo't mention his name - who came up to me on the set and asked if I knew where he could cash a check," Felty recalled, "He said it thousand dollars - but that he needed the cash that day. I said 'sure' and went to the bank and got him his money. He was pretty impressed. He said he couldn't get a check cashed that quick at his own bank in either Hollywood or New York." Feity chuckled.

Among the things Felty made possible was finding a set for '1918" that surpassed anything Hollywood carpenters could huild on a back lot. The original script had a drawing of a house on the cover and Fonte sent Felty a copy, "The minute I saw that picture oo the playbook," Feity recalled, "I thought. That house is right here in town over on Hawkins Street." said, 'How sad,' shook his head and walked away." Rita Parle re-members. "And I thought, yes it is, hut not for the reasons he

It was empty and in disrepair. The producers agreed to restore it in exchange for using it as a set.

HOW does a town like Waxahachie attract major film producers? "Well, we read or hear about a writer or producer planning a movic and we get in touch with them," Felty said, then added in a whisper of modesty, "and sooner or later they sort of find their way to me." The citizens of Waxahachie take pride in their work in the movies as well. One of Feity's favorite topics, next to being Chili Adviser to the governor, is the roles he has played.

But while all the moviemaking and rubbing cloows with stars has brought some excitement to this sleepy Texas town, there is a practical side to it. The economy of Waxahachie, which had been in slow eclipse for most of the last decade, is on an upswing again.

"It's sort of like a fall crop," Felty explained. "A dollar gets turned over three or five times and everybody benefits from it."

"Right now, I still believe in the hasie teachings of the church, but I can't seem to let myself have much to do with it until women have more of a role in it, until women become priests, in other words.

"It's so phony to me, some of it. Women are still doing all the dirty work, as it were. And all the old ladies are still giving them money to perpetuate the system. If all the women in the church would stop putting their mooey into the church for three months, I thi Rome would listen to us."

For outsiders, much of her day in the convent would seem prosaic: perpetual rounds of prayers interspersed with chores and breaks for meals. The ouns rose at 5:30 A.M. and went to bed at 10 P.M. They ate their midday meal in silence at long benchlike tables, eyes cast down. They ate supper as someone read from the Roman martyrology. Before the meals began, groups of nums would tell their faults to the mother superior, listen to her admonishment, then kiss the floor, bow deeply, fold their arms and return to their places.

Recreation was women sitting in a circle and sewing, often making alterations on their habits. "You could talk during recreatioo hut you listened mostly," she says. "That was one of our hardest penances actually because we didn't really have much to talk about

At its worst, the atmosphere was claustrophobic and anti-intellectual, Mail was censored coming and going. They were given one book a year to read, and it was something religious. "But then that was all part of the sacri-fice." Parle says. "The more you suffer, the more souls you save." At the beginning of her time there, she chafed at the psycholo-

"Owning even. Owning God. It was my community. My sisters, my house." They elected her mother superior in 1967. She was 42 and the second-youngest wom-an in the house. "Oh, 1 loved being mother," she says. "I was in my element finally. I'll admit to it. I got to do some of the things we'd been wanting to do for the sisters to make life better."

The changes were small but sig-nificant - and always with the permission of Cardinal Patrick O'Boyle, who oversaw the archdiocese of Washington. She had showers installed for the women who up to then had been relegated to once-a-week baths and washing in their rooms with a pitcher of water and a hucket. She allowed the women to talk to each other at breakfast. She opened the library so the sisters could read whatever they waoted. She stopped censoring the mail.

began snowballing." She had just read the documents of Vatican II - given to her by the outgoing mother of the house - and she was venturing out into the world for occasional workshops and seminars for religious women. "After I became mother I got my eyes opened gradually. She left the Visitation convent

Meanwhile she went back to college and worked part time at Sears. As she moved on to a master's degree at Catholic University, she realized her religious life was over. "Twe been through it all and I will never again let prelates tell me how I'm to lead my life," she says. "Priests and bishops and the Holy See. Men. Telling me this is the way a woman should lead a religious life."

Leaving the coovent was like leaving a marriage. Suddenly she was in graduate school, wrestling with term papers and writing ré-sumes. A counseling service for women in Washington helped her sort out career goals. "It's sort of like a divorced woman who's never worked trying to figure out how to sell herself," she says.

But she did. She finished up her master's, went on for a doctorate at George Washington University and went back to her home state of Nebraska, winning a job first as a counselor at a menual health clinic in the small town of Broken Bow, then a job as administrator of a large health facility in Grand Island All of this makes Rita Parle in some ways a 63-year-old yupple. There are the niceties - she owns a town house and hosts cocktail parties and drives a new Pootiac. But she laments about Nebraska, "Culturally it is much worse than the convent."

She confesses to being rather lonely and frustrated. She's a sinele career woman in a traditional community where almost everyooe is married and the Catholics in her parish church are cordial but distant. "Catholics are that way," she says. "Maybe it's because I'm in mental health and it's a small town, and people think, 'If I speak to her, people will think I have a mental health problem." What is left for Rita Parle are the conflicting thoughts and feelings she wants to recoocile in her mind and in her book. There is a sense of affection for a place where she belooged -hut not for a way of life about which she frankly says, "I don't want it to
